

ALIGNED AND WELL

Often overlooked by medical experts, the WAY we use our body often creates disease.

Why do couch potatoes and competitive athletes suffer from the same chronic ailments, disease, and pain? It's because, like most of us, neither group is using their body in the way it was mechanically designed to be used!

Analyzing human movement (biomechanics) used to be for increasing athletic performance until biomechanical scientist Katy Bowman decided to apply those same principles to the every-day use of the human machine for the purpose of reducing common disease.

The Aligned and Well program offers a simple, natural solution by teaching new movement habits and pointing out any current habits that may be keeping you from getting well.

A scientific, instructional and user-friendly program that teaches people how simple corrections in skeletal and body alignment can reduce current and future ailments.

Consult with your doctor before beginning with this or any other exercise program.
